

BIOGRAPHY

Jack Schaller, Executive Vice President Core & Main

Jack Schaller is executive vice president of Core & Main, a leading specialized distributor with a focus on water, wastewater, storm drainage and fire protection products, and related services. As a member of the executive team, he supports integration of acquired businesses, leads supplier relations and assists with organizational transition.

Schaller spent many years as president at Core & Main, where he led the field sales organization for the core waterworks business.

Schaller is a well-respected industry leader with strong vendor and customer relationships. He is a front-runner in mentoring and developing talent across Core & Main and serves as a thought leader for strategic mergers and acquisitions. Schaller began his more than four-decade career at Sidener Supply Company where he advanced from warehouse to inside sales, outside sales, branch manager and director of purchasing, culminating as president in 1996. He orchestrated the sale of Sidener in 1997 to U.S. Filter, then led the organization through multiple integrations from National Waterworks, to HD Supply, and finally Core & Main.

Schaller holds an MBA from Webster University and a bachelor's degree from the University of Missouri-Columbia. He is an active member of industry organizations including the American Water Works Association, National Utility Contractors Association and Water and Sewer Distributors of America, where he is a former member of the board.
